This afternoon, General Palmer, Deputy to General Norstad, called on me. As was the case at lunch, much of our conversation was upon the Berlin troubles. Palmer seemed to think we should reserve our chief efforts for a later date.

Admiral Loomis, recently appointed Deputy to Admiral Smith, came to see me.

Mac Bundy ~~had~~ called me from the White House yesterday saying they were sending a special courier with a message to me from the President. He, in the person of Lt. Commander Weincoop, arrived this morning. The message concerned a replacement for Allen Dulles as director of CIA. It requires consultation with officials in the security departments of the British Government.
